DEATH OF LINCOLN.

NOAH BROOKS' RECOLLECTIONS OF THE GREAT TRAGEDY.

The President Did Not Want to Go to the Theater, but Would Not Disappoint the Public-A Sorrowing People Under a Weeping Sky That April Morning.

The afternoon and evening of April 14, 1865, were cold, raw and gusty. Dark clouds enveloped the capital, and the air was chilly, with occasional showers. Late in the afternoon I filled an appointment by calling on the president at the White House, and was told by him that he "had had a notion" of sending for me to go to the theater that evening with him and Mrs. Lincoln, but he added that Mrs. Lincoln had already made up a party to take the place of General and Mrs. Grant, who had somewhat un-expectedly left the city for Burlington, N. J. The party was originally planned for the purpose of taking General and Mrs. Grant to see "Our American Cousin" at Ford's theater, and when Grant had decided to leave Washington he (the president) had "felt inclined to give up the whole thing," but as it had been amounced in the morning papers that this distinguished party would go to the theater that night Mrs. Lincoln had rather insisted that they ought to go in order that the expectant public should not be wholly disappointed. On my way home I met Schuyler Colfax, who was about leaving for California, and who tarried with me on the sidewalk a little while, talking about the trip and the people whom 1 knew in San Francisco and Sacramento that he wished to meet. Mr. Lincoln had often talked with me about the possibilities of his eventually taking up his residence in California after his term of office should be over. He thought, he said, that that country would afford better opportunities for his two boys of the older states, and when he heard that Colfax was going to Cali fornia he was greatly interested in his trip and said that he hoped that Colfax would bring him back a good report of what his keen and practiced observation would note in the country which he (Colfax) was about to see for the first

The evening being inclement, I staid within doors to murse a violent cold with which I was afflicted, and my roommate, McA., and I whiled away the time chatting and playing eards. About half past 10 our attention was attracted to the frequent galloping of cavalry or the mounted patrol past the house which we occupied on New York avenue, near the state department building. After awhile quiet was restored, and we retired to our sleeping room in the rear part of the house.

As I turned down the gas I said to my roommate: "Will, I have guessed the cause of the clatter outside tenight. You know Wade Hampton has disappeared with his cavalry somewhere in the mountains of Virginia. Now, my theory of the racket is that he has raided Washington and has pounced down upon the president and has attempted to carry him off." Of course this way Of course this was said jo cosely and without the slightest thought that the president was in any way in danger, and my friend, in a similar spirit, banteringly replied, "What good will that do the rebs unless they carry off Andy Johnson also?" The next morning I was awakened in the early dawn by a loud and hurried knocking on my chamber door, and the voice of Mr. Gardner, the landlord, crying: "Wake, wate, Mr. Brooks! I have dread-

I slipped out, turned the key of the door, and Mr. Gardner came in, pale, trembling and wee begone, like him who "drew Priam's curtain at the dead of night," and told his awful story. At that time it was believed that the president, Mr. Seward. Vice President Johnson and other members of the govern-ment had been killed, and this was the burden of the tale that was told to us. I sank back into my bed, cold and shivering with horror, and for a time it all things had come. I was aroused by the loud weeping of my comrade, who had not left his bed in another part of the room.

When we had sufficiently collected ourselves to dress and go out of doors in the bleak and cheerless April morning, we found in the streets an extraordinary spectacle. They were suddenly crowded with people-men, women and children thronging the pavements and darkening the thoroughfares. It seemed as if every body was in tears. Pale faces, streaming eyes, with now and again an angry, frowning countenance, were on every side. Men and women who were stran gers accosted one another with distressed looks and tearful inquiries for the wel fare of the president and Mr. Seward'. family. The president still lived, but at half past 7 o'clock in the morning the tolling of the bells announced to the lamenting people that he had censed to breathe. His great and loving heart was still. The last official bulletin from the war department stated that he died at 22 minutes past 7 o'clock on the morning of April 15.

Instantly flags were raised at half mast all over the city, the bells tolled solemnly, and with incredible swiftness Washington went into deep, universal mourning. All stores, government de partments and private offices were closed, and everywhere, on the most pretentious residences and on the humbles hovels, were the black badges of grief. Nature seemed to sympathize in the general lamentation, and tears of rain fell from the moist and somber sky. The wind sighed mournfully through streets crowded with sad faced people, and broad folds of funereal drapery flapped heavily in the wind over the decorations of the day before. -Noah Brooks in Cen-

Andres, Jose and Amatin
Stroll down the abareous slow
Neath spreading boughs with plats between
Where rose an 1 belled grande grow.
Tall gray sombroros, sliver trimmed,
Bedecked with spangles, ample brimmed,
Shade from bright rays by clouds undimmed
The eyes of all.

They lelter on with airy grace,
A turn of head this way and that,
While sparkling smiles light up the face
Accenting gay, theatric_chat.
Their jaunty jackets reach the waist,
With rows of buttons closely placed,
And braided trousers, tightly laced,
Costumes complete.

A greater charm is found by far
Than shade, bright flowers and tropic weather
In Juana, Inez and Leonor,
All pretty maids who drive together,
Clear olive faces, lips of red—
But back of them the warder's head,
The duena, accredited
For watchful eyes.

The wavering heat is broken by long rows Of slim acacias, palms and alamos.

In brave attire there walk between,
Jose, Andres and Agastin.
